By Samantha Norling

Collection Overview

Title: Indiana Houses of the 19th and 20th Centuries Image Collection, ca. 1962

Collection ID: PHO004

Primary Creators: Peat, Wilbur David (1898-1966)

Extent: 8.5 linear feet

Date Acquired: August 29, 2016

Languages: English

Scope and Contents of the Materials

This collection consists of 175 silver print black and white photographs of Indiana houses (primarily Indianapolis) built in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Each print is mounted on a board measuring 20 x 16 inches, with notes on the name/description of the house, its location, construction year, and the owner of the house. The photographs are arranged chronologically by construction year, represented by the dates in the box listing (dates of the photographs are unknown). These mounted prints were created by Wilbur David Peat during his time as Director of the John Herron Art Institute (JHAI) in Indianapolis, IN. It is possible that the photographs were displayed at the JHAI, but there is no record of an exhibition. They were likely created around the time that Peat published his book, Indiana Houses of the Nineteenth Century (Indiana Historical Society Press, 1962), as many of the images appear as plates in the book. The prints have been housed in the Print Storage Room of the Indianapolis Museum of Art, and were transferred to the IMA Archives by Curator of Drawings, Prints and Photographs Marty Krause in August 2016.

Biographical Note

Wilbur David Peat was born on November 8, 1898 in China to missionary parents. He became director of the John Herron Art Museum in 1929 and served for 36 years until 1965. He remains the longest-standing director in the history of the Indianapolis Museum of Art. While serving as Director, Peat authored multiple important books on Indiana art including, Indiana Houses of the Nineteenth Century (1962), an exploration of residential architectural styles throughout the state. Peat passed away December 14, 1966.
